BECKETT AND EVANS' RESEARCH UPENDS DEATH PENALTY IN WASHINGTON STATE

Submitted by Ulrika S. O'brien on October 23, 2018 - 6:35pm

On Thursday, October 11, the Washington State Supreme Court unanimously found that imposing the death penalty violated the state's constitutional bar against cruel punishment, and ended capital punishment in Washington. Two UW sociologists did the rigorous analytical research that became instrumental to the court's decision.

Read the article in the Chronicle of Higher Education

Read the article in the Seattle Times

Read the article in Slate

People Involved: Katherine Beckett
News Category: Community Impact, Faculty and Staff, In the Media, Research