COLLATERAL DAMAGE? STATE-BUILDING, CHRISTIAN ELITE FACTIONALISM, AND THEIR EFFECTS ON JEWISH COMMUNITIES IN THE MEDIEVAL AND EARLY MODERN HOLY ROMAN EMPIRE

In furtherance of dissertation research, the DAAD Short Term Research Grant facilitates residency for three months as a visiting scholar at the Arye Maimon Institute for Jewish History (AMIGJ) at Trier University. The dissertation project examines where, when, and why medieval and early modern cities in the Holy Roman Empire expelled their Jewish residents by utilizing quantitative and comparative historical methods and a new spatial database.

People Involved: Kerice Doten-Snitker
Status of Research: Completed/published
Research Type: Projects and Grants
Related Fields: Historical Sociology, Jewish Studies, Political Sociology, Public Policy, Race and Ethnicity, Religion, West European

Source URL: https://soc.washington.edu/research/projects-and-grants/collateral-damage-state-building-christian-elite-factionalism-and-their