Summer 2017
SOCIOLOGY 362

AMERICAN RACIAL AND ETHNIC RELATIONS

In this course, students will address race in the United States (US) as a multi-faceted sociological phenomenon. The course presents a comprehensive overview of the patterns of racial and ethnic differentiation, stratification, and antagonism. Additionally, students will explore the processes that engender, perpetuate, and reshape these relations between different racial and ethnic populations. Course participants will also consider racism, racial ideologies and systems of racial classification, as well as the causes and consequences of the structural and symbolic forces of racial domination that maintain social inequalities among racial/ethnic groups.

For more info, contact Instructor Thiago Marques
Email: thiagm@uw.edu