The Seattle Municipal Court (SMC) is the largest misdemeanor court in the state of Washington and has long considered itself the peoples' court. Through a Community Involved Justice model, the Court strives to make the justice system more effective by re-establishing links between criminal justice service providers and the communities they serve. Community Involved Justice initiatives ultimately seek to transform the way people think about crime - not just as cases to be processed but as problems to be resolved and relationships to be developed and maintained.

Working with defendants, observing court proceedings, and networking with court staff will give students an understanding of misdemeanor probation, an introduction to multiple career paths within the criminal justice system, and offer student interns a better understanding of how the criminal justice system actually operates.

The Seattle Municipal Court internships are unpaid. This year, the Department of Sociology will be able to place between 8 and 10 student interns at Seattle Municipal Court.

Desired qualifications
The Seattle Municipal Court internship is best suited for students wanting to learn more about the criminal justice system and how it intersects with issues of mental health, chemical dependency, and domestic violence, as well as how race, class, and gender issues impact clients in the legal system.

The Seattle Municipal Court internship requires diligence and responsibility. Students must be very detail-oriented, able to work with diverse populations, able to focus for long periods of time, have good oral and written communication skills, able to follow policy, use discretion, and maintain confidentiality.

Intern responsibilities
Seattle Municipal Court interns volunteer as Court Case Aides for a minimum of 8 hours a week (4-hour shifts twice a week) during Winter and Spring quarters.

Student interns at the Seattle Municipal Court work primarily in the Probation Department. Case aides have face-to-face contact with defendants from diverse backgrounds, correspond with community treatment agencies, research and archive paperwork and files, enter client data into the offender database, assist in monitoring clients, check criminal records, as well as various other administrative duties. Some student interns have worked in the Court Resource Center – a dedicated resource physically operating in the Seattle Justice Center to connect offenders with critical social services including food assistance, healthcare, substance dependency services, emergency and permanent housing, mental health counseling, and job readiness.
Important things to know:

- The Seattle Municipal Court internship position is a two-quarter commitment for Winter and Spring quarters. Students who are offered an internship position must also take SOC 404 (TUE 12:30-2:20pm), a weekly two-hour seminar, in Winter quarter. In Spring quarter students enroll in SOC 399 while completing the second quarter of their internship.

- Student interns will be working at the Seattle Justice Center in downtown Seattle at 600 Fifth Ave, Seattle 98104.

- Interns provide their own transportation to and from court.

- To participate, applicants must be current UW-Seattle students. U.S. citizens, legal residents of the United States (green card holders) who have a Social Security number and are authorized to work in the United States, as well as students on F-1 visas are eligible to apply. Priority will be given to Sociology majors but students from other majors are welcome to apply.

- Applicants will undergo a background check. Students with criminal records are not eligible to apply.

- As part of the application process, students will have an initial interview with Susanna Hansson in the Sociology Advising office. Finalists for the positions will then interview with the Seattle Municipal Court Volunteer Coordinator before their internship can be finalized. All interview times will be set up with students via email.

- The complete applications, including academic records, of students who become finalists for an internship position are shared with staff at the internship location.
